development; group facilitation, quality improvement initiatives and strategic development.

Recognizing the need to better balance life and support that of their three daughters, Audra and her husband, Kevin Thompson, developed a plan. She resigned in 2005 and jumped head first into full time family life, developing their children, enforcing nightly meals together, and serving their community. She has volunteered hundreds of hours and coordinated multiple events over the years with primary focus given to her children's schools and cancer support. In addition to sharing in her families interests and needs, Audra enjoys cooking and entertaining, traveling, and reading.
